

Got the Printer Blues?

Have you ever been?

- ☹ Enraged by the End of Roll.
- ☹ Pretty Miffed about Paper Mountains.
- ☹ Fed up with Fading Print Quality.
- ☹ Just Mad about Jammed Mechanisms.
- ☹ Worried about Worn Print-Heads.

Or have you just about 'GIVEN UP THE GHOST' on Printing?

There is a Paper-Less alternative, in the 20th Century.

☺ Why not consider a Modern TrueLoad Accessory that:

- ✓ Has No Moving Parts that are likely to wear out.
And also uses No Consumables at all.
- ✓ Retains approx. the last 2 years Transaction Reports. #1
Stored on a Rolling Basis, keeping your records on-track.
- ✓ Can accurately transfer your Reports to your Site Office PC.
Into an Excel™ Spread-Sheet, putting you in control of your Data.

Perhaps it's time to Enhance your TrueLoad with a...

The TrueLoad DP-512 Data-Pod.

What is it? Functionally similar to a 'Black-Box' on a Plane, though not quite as robust. The device is a small 'Grey Box' that is hidden away on the vehicle. The umbilical connection is via the 'existing' TrueLoad → Printer Comms Lead. An 'iButton'™ Connection Point is provided to Up-Load the Reports...

Operation: Receives Transaction Reports, which are Time-Stamped, Compressed, and Stored. The most recent 32,600 Records are retained, lasting 2 Years, at 80 Reports / Day. This is achieved without any Operator actions, no training required at all. Routinely, Reports are Up-Loaded to an iButton, how quick do you need the Data? The iButton is taken to the site PC, and the Reports are Down-Loaded into Excel. The custom software provided initiates a Down-Load via a Single Mouse-Click. It really is as simple as that...

iButton? A Stainless Steel Can, smaller than a £1 Coin, it is virtually indestructible... It is an Electronic Memory device, into which the Transaction Reports are stored. Chosen primarily for its ability to withstand all environments: These devices are commonly used as a part of Plant Vehicle Security Systems. Visit <http://www.iButton.com> for further iButton data.
